

Understanding Homosexuality

A Metaphysical Perspective

By David Moyle

The whole issue of homosexuality has torn huge ugly holes in our societies, by socially ostracizing and persecuting the individuals who feel drawn toward member of their own sex for relationships rather than social norm of selection partners from the opposite gender. This closed minded attitude toward a minority behavior has also caused soul damage to those individuals who personally experience this state of being whether openly, secretly, or suppressed. The source of this unfortunate circumstance is based on gross misunderstanding and disinformation about our true beingness passed through our religions. The first evidence of this comes through when one finds out that some cultures do not socially ostracize those few who feel sexual preference for their own gender, such evidence eroding the notion that it is “human nature” to detest aberrant sexual preference.

Explanation for the phenomena cannot come from our past medical, psychological, or theological models. All of these models are flawed, which is why it is becoming increasingly apparent that we need a new model to define our race. A model broader, more spiritual, and more in tune with the notion that all things are connected is needed to release these unbalanced though patterns from our race.

Once one comes to the knowledge that what we really are as humans is an eternal spirit temporarily occupying a biological instrument to allow us to experience the physical world, not the reverse, our perspectives on many things change. We are not an animal-derived creature with a spirit, we are spiritual beings occupying a physical body. With this concept as our backdrop, homosexuality becomes not so difficult to explain.

When we as spiritual beings enter into the physical universe, our highest level body of form, our light body, takes on an electrical alignment, either positive or negative. Likewise, the physical human body is electrically charged either positive or negative, male gender being positive, female, negative. These terms are not to imply any judgement or value to one gender over the other, any more than we would imply such value to the positive and negative posts of a battery or poles of a magnet. They simply are terms signifying an electrical difference between the two. Our higher dimensions of our spirit-selves are beyond polarity, and beyond gender (thus the notion of God being either masculine or feminine is a perspective from limited human consciousness).

This electrical difference causes a normal, automatic attraction between the genders, just like the positive pole of a magnet is attracted to a negative pole. Likewise, like charges of magnets repel another of the same charge. Uniquely in humans though, we can have a mixed message come through: the physical body of a male will be sexually attracted to the physical body of the human female. When the light body that inhabits these bodies is in electrical alignment, a “normal” heterosexual attraction exists. When a male body has a female (negative) light body, however, the ego inhabiting the body experiences both attraction and repulsion at the same time, hence the sensation of being a woman in a man’s body. The same situation occurs when a female body is occupied by a male (positive) spirit. The result of this experience will depend upon the relative strengths of the three aspects of the individual – the body, the ego, and the light body. All other aspects of the individual can be as normal as that which exist in the culture of the person. Intellectual prowess, emotions, ability to express love and compassion, intuition, natural talents, and so forth will all still exist in the person.

Why do these circumstances occur? Why would a spirit-self wish to embody itself into its opposite polarity? For positive/male spirits, perhaps it is seeking refuge in a female form to escape the experiences of hundreds of lifetimes of being conscripted into a life of a cheaply expendable soldier, being slaughtered for the mere purpose of gaining or defending territory for the current tyrant. He wants to live at least one full life to old age. He might also have abused, brutalized, or raped women in past lives and needs to experience the other side of that which he dished out.

For the female spirit-self, “hiding out” in a male form might be to escape the many lifetimes of degradation, abuse, and rape she has experienced. She may want to experience the physical strength and power of a man’s body and perhaps better understand why so many males fear the female gender and therefore disempower them and hurt them. Having been raped, she may want to experience being the rapist.

Biblical text to the contrary, God expresses no judgement about any of these matters, for God judges nothing. To do so would be for God to limit Its expression of Itself, something It will never do. Homosexuality does not exist elsewhere in the kingdom of Nature like it does in humans simply because only humans have individual spirit-selves.

Homosexuality can never be defined in terms of any bodily or mental disease. Neither is it a choice of the Ego-self; it cannot be un-chosen by the personality of an individual. The expression of this state can be suppressed by the Ego and often is suppressed due to the cultural distaste for this poorly understood phenomena. This suppression usually leads to severe depression, lack of self-esteem and rapid development of degenerative diseases through self hate. All of the negative consequences of homosexuality derive from the cultural attitudes and closed mindedness, not the state of homosexuality itself. Homosexuality cannot be cured; it cannot be resolved through psychotherapy of the personality. It can only be understood and allowed, so that those spirit-selves who have chosen to bring on the experience can do so and add their natural values and talents and diversity to the culture they have come into and add to their knowledge and wisdom which they collect in their soul to further understand the fullness of themselves as a spiritual being.
